Milan, 11 February 2019 – Doxa, Italy's leading market research and analysis firm, and Connexia, the marketing and communications consultancy agency, are hosting the seventh "WAKE UP INNOVATORS", a series of monthly meetings about the digital culture, science, innovation, and disruptive communication.

This time we're talking about China.

Until a few years ago, China was seen as one of the more fragile, unstable countries in terms of social and economic development and a global manufacturer of low-quality goods. But China has implemented major funding initiatives and social and political reforms focused on promoting and supporting the innovation culture over the past ten years, and is now rapidly developing across a multitude of sectors. China has managed to completely revolutionise its role in the global economy with projects and initiatives, such as Made in China 2015 and The New Silk Road, and accomplish levels of social control the like of which have never been seen before.

But what will be the consequences of this transformation process in the future? Simone Pieranni, the founder of China Files and editor-in-chief of il manifesto, and Italo Marconi, Connexia's Chief Innovation Officer, will discuss the past, present and imminent future of China during a talk entitled, "China 4.0: from the world's factory to technological leader."
